Weather Discussion:

Occasionally cloudy skies with sporadic shower activity can be expected across our islands into early Saturday. Shortly after, fair to partly cloudy conditions should dominate the weekend weather pattern. Along Monday, occasional cloudy skies are anticipated as unstable conditions affect the islands; a few scattered light to moderate showers are forecast.

Moderate/fresh (20-35km/h) easterly to east south easterly trades will cross the islands within the next 24 hours, slightly reducing (~30km/h) from Sunday. Seas are slight to moderate in open water and rising by Saturday. Swell heights should peak up to 1.5m on western coasts and near to 2.0m on eastern coasts. Small craft operators and sea bathers should exercise caution for above normal sea swells. In addition, varying concentrations of Saharan dust haze intrusion will cross the islands over the next three days, reducing air quality and visibility.
